Shiela;

I reviewed this draft of the CWPI and have marked a few files for deletion. I subscribe to the Canadian Journal of Native Studies so that was easy to check, and in relation to our discussion last week, a number of the entries were not appropriate to a Women's Periodical Index. (I have asked you to delete a few others which seem to be of the same type, although I did not go to the library and check them, and I did not, however, ask for all of those type of entries to be deleted).

The description of the index in the introductory material as "Canadian feminist writing and research", helps identify the boundaries of what should be included and what should be excluded, but you should not be surprised if you need to work at getting the concept clearly in your own mind. Our job, however, is to stick as close as we can to those parameters, for an index is only useful to researchers/community workers if they can predict what kind of material they will find in it. "Women-centred" research, which is one way of defining feminist with a small f, implies that women are the centre of the research or that there is an analysis from a woman's perspective which is clearly identified as such. I think when we talked I indicated to you that, for example, we would include a feminist analysis of the state although it would not be "about women". Rather, it would constantly take into account the way that the state impacts on women or constructs and maintains gender boundaries in the society. However, in general, any article which is clearly "about women" should be included in the index, if it is published in Canada, or published elsewhere but is about women in Canada) although we have often debated whether they should necessarily all be classified as feminist or women-centred!) An article which mentions women, or gender, or linguistic terms for mother etc is not centred on women and should not be in this particular index (CWPI).

I think if you review the articles I have asked you to delete before you work on the next index, it will help you to get "the boundaries" a little clearer. That is why I thought it important to ask you to do this now, rather than wait for the next time around. I think you will also realize when you do that work that quite a few of the articles included this time should not be there, but it would be too time-consuming to go through them now with a fine-tooth comb and identify all of those which need to be eliminated. Hopefully, by the next time, there will be less of that kind of work to do.

Finally, just to remind you, we did not talk about the use of the re: field this morning but we did when we met last week. Recall, the index is primarily a "title words index". If you scan our introduction, it describes the process we are telling our readers that we use. You should not add descriptors if the title already includes a word which describes the article (i.e. don't worry about synonyms etc). In general, you should not expect to read these articles; you should scan the table of contents of the periodicals and identify those which specify women/gender or some topic clearly related to women (such as abortion, lesbian identity etc), and accept only those titles. Similarly, the book review section will carry words in their titles which indicate if the book is focused on women. In the case of those articles which are from "comprehensively indexed" periodicals, you may need to add a descriptor if the title does not make clear the focus, the central point, of the article. Rarely, because you know an author for example, you may know that a piece is "feminist" (again, small f) and know to include it even though the title would give you no hint (Julie Cruickshank's writings on aboriginal people are a good example; she almost always focuses on women in some way, and works with them in a totally collaborative style of research/writing). I am going on at some length about this, because of the problem you have indicated with the time required to complete the index work. Almost every woman who has done this job has had trouble early in their period of work, because they cannot help but want to read the articles. They have always had to be reminded that the index does not claim that level of indexing, and does not have ✓ the kind of funding which would suggest that kind of work.

That's all Shiela. I will be back the end of December, which should give us enough time to be sure the next issue of this volume is okay. Will you also please keep your eyes open for other Canadian women's periodicals or writing, like Horizons, which we need to include in the index? If any are not in the resource centre, perhaps Mavis D would write to see if they would grant us an exchange subscription. It is imperative that we not be "bound" by the library holdings for those types of periodicals.

Mavis

Notes on CWPI check for Mavis Dolensky, cumulative of Vol. 4 (1988/89)

Our time period for this volume is March of 1988 to April of 1989, with three issues each covering four months (March to June etc.). We were, at this time, including title pages of the periodicals and that enabled me to solve one major problem (with Broadside) as they provide volume and issue number of our comprehensively indexed periodicals. I am going to list below the errors which I identified in a scan; this scan may not have identified all problems for the full text is 344 pages and I did not do a detailed scan of every entry but rather searched under KWOK entries for possible problems.

Of the errors listed below, the only two I am going to ask Mavis to ask Ralph if he can correct is the Broadside problem (as it adds a number of extra entries to the text) and the double entry under homeless. Other errors/problems are included her as reminders for discussion with whoever is preparing future entry documents.

Problems to change if Ralph can do it

1. Broadside error. One issue of Broadside has been double-entered, with a 1988 and a 1989 date. The issue is Vol. 10, issue 3, December 1988-January 1989. It should be entered under the 1989 date only, which means that the specific records showing a 1988 date need to be removed. This does not mean all 1988 entries for Broadside, but only the double-entered ones. I may have missed a few, but if Ralph can locate the record and remove it they are as follows (I have included the page number on the final text; this is not the same as a line number or a record number and I don't know how easy it is for him to locate the entry). To reiterate, the 1988 record should be removed, the 1989 record with the same information in it should be left in place.

p. 70. Under Dawson, T.B. two entries:

Fetal Rights, Maternal Wrongs
New Focus on Rape

(Note, these do not show as a double entries as spacing is different in the author's initials between the two entries; however both are in the entry above this one in which T. B. has an additional space. They should be left there, as they include the correct years.

p. 120. Under Gerland, Jane Rule from the Heart

p. 221. Under Pay Equity, Pay Equity Conference

p. 226. Under picture, Picture a Woman

p. 227. Under Pike, Raising Race Question

p.227. Under Pioneering, Pioneering Lesbian Studies

p.238. Under Press, Sister Vision Press

p. 245, Under Race, A Debate on Race

p. 317. Under TTC. TTC Safety

2. p. 138. Under Homeless. Double entry of file, Homeless women provided shelter under settlement. If possible, should also be removed.

3. Spacing in 1st 3 entries if it is easy - assault + Mitchell, delete one space; starship add a space after

Other errors/problems

1. p. 141 Huron D.I. for one entry, Huron, D.I. for another, creates two KWOC terms.

2. I'm on p. 141 is likely a stop list issue (do we now stop all one letter words? two letters?)

3. p 145. The same article appears as Indian-White in one KWOC entry and Indian/White in another. However, it is not an inputting error but a reflection of inconsistency in review titles. It might be picked up in an edit of text and changed, but could not be easily picked up by the person entering, especially if they happen to be in different issues which they may well be.

4. p. 152. The first name Jane appears, with referenc to Jane Siberry. I thought we were using @ symbols to join such names (as must be done with Jane Rule above) or indexing only the last names (suppressing the first).

5. p 152. Jeunes in one article, jeunnes in another. One must be wrong.

6. p. 153 Johanna (first name problems, as in Jane p. 152 above)

7. p. 156 Kay Armitage (first name problems, as in Jane p. 152 above)

8. p. 175 Lloyd, B-A This author enters twice, I thought because one had a period about B.A. and the other did not, but they both have periods...I don't know why it appears twice as a KWOC.

9. p. 176. The name Lorraine Desmarais appears as a KWOC term but not in the line entry...I have no idea how that would happen.

10. p. 177. Luxton appears in one KWOC and Luxton M. in the next, although Luxton, M. is used in both entries. I must assume we have somehow defined these two fields differently. It is not a problem worth solving now, as we will be going off SPIRES in the next year or so.

11. p. 213. Ontatio for Ontario (typo) (Spelll checker should be used on text before it is uploaded, and English text should be separated from French in the input file so spell checker is not checking the French text).

12. p. 215. Kwoc is Other; j=other appears as text. I don' t know why this happens. A similar error appears in a number of entries, as follows:

p. 216, KWOC is Own; j=Room of One's Own *2

p. 217, KWOC is Pandora; j=Pandora

p. 218, KWOC is Parents; j= Communiqu'elles

p. 248, KWOC is Recherche, j= RFR

p. 228, KWOC is poetry, j=Atlantis; same spot j= pandora

p. 240, KWOC is profil, d=politique

13. Peterson L on p. 224 and again as Peterson, L on p. 225 (Not a double entry but double KWOC because of the comma after her name the second time).

14. p. 313, Tisdale=Nisbet is likely to be Tisdale-Nisbet

I can think of a lot of things to do here to improve the output, but it is basically good and I think I won't further consider changes until I look at cum volume 5, 6, 7, 8.

The index could also provide a good resource for doing an analysis of publishing in Canada; the way it reflects the rest of the world, the way it reflects the domestic context, possibly changes in terms as time goes on etc. With that in mind some entries might differ. For example, I think book reviews should be pulled out in English as they are in French (in English they are all under reviews, which can include films and theatre events etc; the ideal KWOC would be review-film; or book etc (as the modifying term).
